TO GUARD PUBLIC FUNDS.

NEW SYSTEM WILL HOLD ALL PERSONS TO ACCOUNT FOR MONEY EXPENDED.

Havana, March 18.-Major Kennon, of Governor-General Brooke's staff, has been actively engaged in the last few weeks in evolving a system of checks for the purpose of regulating and fixing the responsibility of the disbursers of public funds in Cuba by the system found to be most complete and effective. To this end Mr. Ladd, auditor of customs at Havana, will be appointed Auditor-General of Cuba. Major Kennon has combined the Army regulations referring to the disbursing of money and the accounting therefor with the laws prevailing in the American Treasury Department, altering and revising them to meet the particular requirements of Cuba. The new system applies to all persons. The system will be published immediately, with retroactive effect from January This new order of affairs will probably prove irksome to the Cubans, who are not accustomed to the strictest accountability in the case of pub He funds. Some time ago, in a budget sub mitted to General Brooke for approval by the Department of Public Works, there appeared items of $40,000 for repairs to a certain bridge in the country, and also $90,000 for repairs on country roads. These items were not approved, and showed to the military authorities the necessity for establishing the present system. The Cuban Military Assembly meets again on Monday, and it is reported that if there is no quorum, which is probable, it will dissolve of its own accord, public opinion having been too Messrs, Catlin, Hecker and Dady return to the United States to-morrow

DENOUNCING CUBAN ASSEMBLY. GOMEZ SAYS THAT BOTH ASSEMBLY AND ARMY SHOULD DISBAND.

Washington, March 18.-Two letters from Gen eral Gomez, dated at Havana on March 6 and a have been received by Gonzalo de Quesade, in which the General urges that the Cuban Assembly as well as the army should dissolve, leaving the Cuban people free to begin the formation of a government. The letters were written just be-fore the Assembly deposed Gomez, but he said that he was being hampered by the Assembly. He says:

The essential thing is the disbanding of the army, for while the Cubans remain in arms, supported by charity, their situation is sad for the men who have fought well and long for their country's cause. They must be disbanded so that they may return to work. Confidence and public peace may be renewed, capital come from its hidking-places and seek investment. Both the army and the Assembly should dissolve. Then the people would be free to organize and take up the solving of its final problem, the constitution of its government.

General Gomez speaks of the satisfactory coferences with General Brooke. Mr. Quesada has received a dispatch from the Mayor of Matanzas, Sefor Carnal, saying: "The municipality of Matanzas protests against the action of Assembly and renews to you its esteem."

A NEW SATELLITE OF SATURN FOUND.

PHOTOGRAPHIC MEANS.

Cambridge, Mass., March 18 -A new satellite of the planet Saturn has been discovered by Professor William H. Pickering at the Harvard College Observatory. This satellite is three and a half times as distant from Saturn as lapetus, the outermost satellite hitherto known. The period is about seventeen months and the magnitude afteen and a half. The satellite appears on four plates taken at the Aregulpa station with the Bruce photo-graphic telescope. The last discovery among the satellites of Saturn was made half a century ago, in September, Isia by Professor George P. Bond.

The number of satellites with which Saturn has herr credited hitherto is eight. The discovery of Japetus, the outermost of these, is sometimes said to have been the joint work of George P. Bond and his father, William Cranch Bond, director of Harard Observatory from 1840 until his death in Some authorities also assign to the two Bonds the finding of Neptune's one satellite, but it will be observed that no claim of that sort is made in the foregoing dispatch, which is presumably inspired by the management of the Harvard Observatory.
William II. Pickering is a brother of the present director of that institution, and has for several years been connected with the branch observatory years been connected with the branch observatory at Areguipa. He has done a variety of notable work, but is particularly formous for photographic research. This is the first satellite of a planet to be found by photography. Asteroids, nebolic, comers, variable stars and other celestial objects have been discovered by such means, but until now no satellites. no satellites.
This event will remind astronomers of the dis-covery of the two satellites of Mars by Asuph Hall at the Naval Observatory in Washington, in August, 1871, and of Juniter's fifth satellite by Edward Emerson Barnard, then at the Lick Ob-sevatory, in September, 1892.

PREPARING TO EXCHANGE RATIFICA- VALE UNIVERSITY'S MOST FAMOUS SCHOLAR PASSES AWAY AT

> Marsh, M. A., Ph. D., LL. D., Professor of Paleontology at Yale University, curator of the geological collection at the same institution, and one of the most famous figures. National and international, in geological research, died at 9:55 o'clock this morning, at his home in Prospectst., after a week's illness, from pneumonia, at the age of sixty-seven years. Professor Marsh was Yale's most famous scholar, his reputation on account of his marvellous achievements in paleontology being world-wide. In addition to this, his literary contributions on the subject gave him a renown which caused him to be known as among the greatest investigators and scholars of the age.

> In addition to the degrees conferred upon him by his alma mater. Yale, he was honored with the degree of Ph. D. by the University of Heidelberg, in 1886, and in the same year Harvard conferred upon him the degree of LL. D.

He was president of the National Academy of Sciences, member of the Geological Society of London and Germany, a member of the Royal Irish Academy, member of the Royal Bavarian Academy of Science and of the Royal Academy of Denmark and Belgium. Last year he was awarded the prize of the French Royal Academy of Science.

Othniel Charles Marsh was born at Lockpart, N. Y., on October 29, 1831. He was graduated at Yale in 1800, and continued in graduate study for two years at the Sheffeld Scientific School, deveting his attention to mineralogy and paleontology. his student days he made an important beginning. as a paleontologist by the discovery and description of Rosauros acadianus, a large reptile from the coal formation of Nova Scotia. He spent the years from 1802 to 1805 in the Universities of Berlin, Heidlberg and Breslau under such teachers as Ehrenber, studying zoology, geology and mineralogy

He then returned to the United States to accept the professorship of paleontology at Vale. This chair was established for him, and he retained it until his death. Besides the work of teaching he devoted his life to the investigation of extinct vertebrate animals, especially of the remains that were collected in the Bocky Mountain region by expeditions organized and led by himself, and in later years by parties sent into the field under his direction. In pursuing these researches Professor times. On his earlier expeditions he frequently subjected himself to much hardship and danger, for they were carried into unexplored regions often occupied by hostile Indians, and he frequently had a have the protection of escorts of United States of the Government. In these various expeditions Professor Marsh discovered hundreds of new species of extinct verte brates, many of which had been entirely unknown to the world, and others had never before been discovered in America. Among these discoveries were a new sub-class of birds with teeth (odontornithes) and the first known American pterodae tyls, two new orders of large mammals from the cocene tertiary of the Rocky Mountains, the siontia, the dinocerata, elephantine in bulk, bearing on their skulls two or more pairs of horncores; the cohippus, orohippus and epihippus, the earliest known ancestors of the horse, and the first monkeys, bats and marsupials that were found in this country. He also got from the miocene the frontotheridae, a new family of ungulates, with their skulls armed with a single pair of horns, and from the jurassic the first mammals of that formation to be found in America, including several families of dinoscurs and some reptiles of enormous size.

It was on one of these expeditions that he learned of the frauds that were being practised on the Indians, and his efforts in their behalf in 1875 resuited in securing better treatment for the wards

Early in 1808 Professor Marsh presented his entire collections the work of a lifetime—to the Pealody Museum of Yale University. In the let-ter of gift to the corporation Professor Marsh said: "It is thirty years and more since George Pea-body (uncle of Professor Marsh) established at Yale by a gift of $150,000 the museum which bears his name. This was in 1806, the year I began my work as professor of paleontology, and I see d this gift mainly with a view of building up a department of paleontology that would be a school of original research as well as one of instruction." He also briefly described the collections. According to this letter, they included six of special importance, first, vertebrate fossils, pronounced by Huxley in 1876 to be surpassed by no other in the world. Darwin, in 1878, expressed a strong desire to visit America for the sole purpose of seeing the collection. Since then it has been more than doubled in size and value, and still holds the first rank. The second was of fossil footprints. These specimens are mainly from the Connecticut Valley, and form one of the most extensive and complete collections of the kind in the country. The third is of invertebrate fossils. They were partly collected by Professor Marsh, but mostly purchased by him. They include the largest collection of nearly entire triloutes yet discovered, and one of the rarest series of siturian sponges known. The fourth collection is of recent osteology, and includes skeletons of rare existing vertebrates from every part of the world. It is especially rich in anthropoid apes, the gorillas being represented by thirteen individuals. The collection of American Breheology and ethnology is rich in Central American and Mexican antiquities. It includes many good ornaments.
